AIR SHOW STOPPERS

- Arthur Lapham was a wing-walker demonstrating his skills over Staten Island, New York in 1913. He lost his footing and fell 300 feet. He landed in the mud of the salt flats near Prince's Bay, where he was buried up to his armpits in the tidal marsh. He was dirty but uninjured.
- At an air show in the 1920s, Al Wilson was hanging from the wing of one plane without a parachute while he waited for a second stunt pilot to fly under him in the old "plane-change" stunt. He lost his grip and fell. The pilot of the second plane went into a dive and pulled up underneath Wilson's falling body. Wilson went head first through the wing of the plane and stuck fast, managing to hang on until the plane landed safely.
- Bob Hoover was in his stunt plane in when the engine went dead, leaving him without enough altitude to get back to the runway. As he approached the airport it looked like he was going to crash into the chain link fence surrounding the runway. Just at that moment a truck happened to be passing by on the road. Hoover managed to bounce his wheels of the top of the truck, giving him sufficient altitude to clear the fence and land safely.

SUBMARINE SCRAPES

- During World War I, a U.S. submarine spotted a German sub and fired two torpedoes at it, one right after the other. Soon there was a huge explosion, yet the German sub continued on its way completely unharmed. Apparently the second torpedo had been travelling a little faster than the first one. They crashed and exploded, leaving the German sub untouched.
- Several Germans were standing on the observation deck of a submarine during World War I when they suddenly saw the periscope of an enemy sub nearby. Before they could do anything about it, a torpedo was heading their way. It was coming so fast that there was nothing to do but watch, so the men were very surprised to see the torpedo, which had been running on the surface of the water, skip out of the water, bounce off the deck of the sub, then splash down into the ocean on the opposite side and speed harmlessly away.
- Charles "Swede" Momsen was captain of a submarine when it went out of control and plunged to the bottom of the ocean in the middle of the Caribbean. The bow was buried and stuck fast in the mud and it looked like the sub was doomed. Momsen solved the problem by flooding the torpedo tubes, then blasting the water out of them with compressed air. The sub popped free.

BOAT PROBLEMS

- In 1827 three sailors were on board a schooner when a huge wave washed all of them overboard. A minute later another huge wave washed all of them back on board.
- In 1834 two Maori women were the only survivors after a canoe sank off New Zealand. When a dead whale floated by with the harpoon still stuck in it, they used the line from the harpoon to haul themselves aboard the carcass. They floated 80 miles to safety.

He fell overboard and his assistant jumped overboard to save him— leaving the motorboat heading out to sea under full power with no one to man the controls. NUGGET OF KNOWLEDGE

When a buzz saw blade tore loose from its moorings in a Florida sawmill, the blade went ripping through the side of the mill, then buzzed its way through the side of a house next door. It sliced the kitchen table into two parts before continuing out the other side of the house. The resident who was having breakfast at the table was more than a little surprised.

- In 1868 the USS Wateree was stationed off Peru. It was a flat-bottomed gunboat. A large earthquake shook the shore. Immediately afterward the sea receded leaving every boat in the harbor sitting on the bottom of the ocean. All the other boats with V-shaped keels ended up lying on their sides, but the flat bottomed Wateree sat comfortably on the mud. When the sea swept back forming a large seismic wave, the other ships were hurled around and rolled over and over, but the Wateree rode the tide inland, scraping the tops of the city's tallest buildings until it was deposited, unharmed, a mile inland.

OOPSIE

- In 1952 an Air Force captain was in a cargo plane over Korea when he accidentally fell out of the open door. Just as he was preparing to pull the ripcord on his parachute, the plane hit a sudden strong downdraft and dropped. The captain fell back into the plane through the same door he had just fallen out of.

MISC. MIRACLES

- During the bombing of London in World War II, a pretty young lady was taking a bath when her home was hit by a bomb. The bathtub was thrown in the air and came down upside-down with the girl underneath it. The tub sheltered her from the collapsing rubble. Rescuers digging through the ruins looking for survivors were very surprised to find a naked girl unharmed under the bathtub.

- Shigeyoshi Morimoto lived in Nagasaki but was working at a job in Hiroshima. He was in a store less than 900 yards from ground zero when the first atomic bomb exploded over Hiroshima in 1945. The collapsed building offered him shelter from the blast. He hurried home to Nagasaki. As he was telling his wife about the terrible bomb, he saw another flash out the window and shoved his family into the cellar in the nick of time. Morimoto survived two atomic bomb blasts.

- In 1986 a 19-year-old student was sitting on the window ledge of his 9th floor dorm room at the University of California at Berkeley. He lost his balance and fell, crashing through the canvas sunroof of a parked car below him. The seat cushions in the car also softened his fall. He was only bruised.

- Sarah Ann Henley jumped off the Clifton Suspension Bridge in England in 1885. During the 250-foot drop, her skirts and petticoat acted as a parachute and she landed in the river mud, injured but alive.

- Seven Japanese acrobats were in a bus travelling near Tokyo in 1933. The bus went over the side of a cliff, turning over and over as it went down the mountain side. The rolling slowed briefly when the bus hit a large rock. In that instant all seven acrobats hurled themselves through the open windows where they landed in the branches of a tree. None were seriously injured.

Fabulous Food BETTER BAKING

- Charles was born to a farming family in New Hampshire in 1842. As a young man, he and his father moved to Minneapolis to join his uncle. They pooled their resources and bought a flour mill, naming it after themselves.
- By 1880 they had acquired four more mills, and in 1881 they constructed the biggest flour mill in the world, causing Minneapolis to grow as a flour milling center and spurring growth of railroads throughout the area to carry grain and flour.
- Charles traveled the world researching new techniques. By 1889 they were producing 10,000 barrels of flour per day. In 1899 they merged with a British firm to become the biggest flour milling corporation in the world.
- At the time, millers would customarily mark their best flour with three X's to denote the finest flour. Charles began to mark his best with four X's to show it was even better. The company grew into one of the largest food conglomerates in the nation: Pillsbury.

EVEN BETTER BAKING

- Carl Smith was an executive for General Mills when he took a train trip in 1930. While en route, he went into the dining car after the dinner hour and was surprised when the chef served him fresh hot biscuits along with his meal within just a few minutes. After eating, he went to ask the chef how he had been able to make fresh biscuits on such short notice.
- The chef explained that he always kept lard, flour, baking powder, and salt blended in an ice chest. Then all he had to do was pull out some dough and pop it into the oven.

- Intrigued, Smith asked the research division of General Mills to come up with a way to package such a mixture in a box, designed so that it would not go rancid in the cupboard.
- General Mills' new product was introduced to the public in 1931, less than a year after Carl's discovery on the train. It was a hit.
- By 1932 there were 96 competitors on the market, but by the following year only six were left. When World War II started, working women needing quick solutions in the kitchen used it more than ever. Carl Smith's product still sells in grocery stores across the nation today. It's called Bisquick.

BEST BAKING YET

- In 1930 a baker in Kentucky named Lively Willoughby was looking for products to expand his line. He wanted to invent a pre-made dinner roll that ladies could take home and cook themselves. He tried storing unbaked biscuits inside cardboard tubes, but they tended to explode.
- Through experimentation, Willoughby controlled the explosive factor and discovered that if he wrapped the dough in tin foil before placing it in the tubes, and then sealed the ends of the tubes with metal lids, the dough would stay fresh for quite a long time in the refrigerator. When baked, the biscuits were deliciously similar to homemade rolls.

- After patenting the pressurized foil sleeve, he teamed up with a local flour company called Ballard & Ballard. For the next 20 years their brand of biscuits-in-a-can sold well throughout the American South, where biscuits were a staple of the local diet. Housewives loved the time-saving measure.
- In 1951 Pillsbury bought out Ballard & Ballard, acquired the rights to the method of making biscuits in a can, and the new biscuit went nationwide. In 1965 an advertising mascot with an infectious giggle made his debut on national television to promote the product. The biscuits are called Poppin' Fresh, with the Poppin' Fresh Dough Boy as their mascot.

MASTERS TOURNAMENT

- Before Tiger Woods, there was Bobby Jones. In the 1920s, Jones dominated the world of golf, winning 13 of the 21 major championships he entered. He retired from the golf circuit in 1930 at the age of 28, having hit the peak of his career when he won not only the U.S. and British Opens but also the U.S. and British Amateurs, all in the same year. This feat, known as the Grand Slam, has never been repeated. Jones never earned a penny playing golf but maintained his amateur status, and retired in order to spend more time with his family and his law practice. He went on to write golf books and articles, design better clubs, and make instructional movies. But more than anything else, he wanted to design the world's finest golf course near his hometown of Atlanta, mostly because he wanted a private golf course where he and his friends could play without being mobbed by fans.
- Jones teamed up with New York banker Clifford Roberts and they began to look for property. They wanted land that had a stream, that had contours, and that was beautiful. When they first laid eyes on Fruitlands Nursery, they knew they had found what they were looking for.
- Fruitlands Nursery was started by a horticulturist named Berchmann who grew trees, flowers, and shrubs imported from all over the world. They grew well on his 365 acres near sea level in the mild climate of Augusta, Georgia. It was the very first commercial nursery in the southern U.S. When Berchmann died in 1883, his son Prosper carried on and was responsible for introducing the azalea to the American public. When Prosper died in 1910, business halted and the heirs began to look for a buyer. The purchase price – at the outset of the Depression – was $70,000.

- A professional golf course designer named Mackensie came from Scotland to plan the architecture and landscaping. Work was begun in 1931. Each of the holes is named after one of the shrubs, flowers, or trees that grow on the course: Pink Dogwood, Juniper, Firethorn, and so on. Bobby hit thousands of test shots as the course was in progress. He wanted three approaches to each hole: the safe route, the hard route, and the crazy route. The grand opening was in 1933.
- It was such a beautiful course that the U.S. Golf Association approached Bobby with the idea of holding a tournament there. Bobby declined, feeling that if there were to be a tournament on his course, he should be the host. His first tournament took place in 1934, and Jones named it the Augusta National Invitation Tournament. Roberts wanted it to be called the Masters Tournament, but Bobby Jones thought that title was a bit presumptuous.
- People came from 38 states to watch that first tournament, and every hotel room in the town of Augusta, population 60,000, was full. The purse was $1,500. Everyone began calling it the Masters in spite of Bobby's protests. In 1939, he relented and the title of the tournament was officially changed. It's the only major golf tournament to return to the same site every year, although the tournament was suspended during World War II, while turkeys and cows were raised on the grounds to help with the war effort.
- Bobby Jones played in the first 12 tournaments, but never won. His best finish was a tie for 13th place, which happened at the very first tournament. He never broke par. He only participated because his name was a big draw and he wanted the best turnout possible. Bobby Jones died in 1971 at the age of 69.

PAW'S CORNER By Sam Mazzotta

Rest in Peace, Riley

DEAR PAW'S CORNER: I wanted to write and tell you about "Riley," a little dog we fostered. He came to us after being rescued from a terrible living situation, and he had spent a long time getting medical treatment at the local shelter before being cleared to stay with a family.

Riley was emaciated when he was rescued. He was missing one eye from an attack by another dog. As a mixed-breed toy terrier, he had specific health needs that weren't met, and by the time he reached the shelter had severe kidney disease and diminished neurological function.

The vet told us that we would likely be his last family. Because his heart and kidneys were damaged, along with other issues, he was not expected to live more than six months. Knowing this, we were determined to make his final days as comfortable and loved as possible. We have another rescue, a fierce little mutt named "Zu-Zu," who became Riley's little sister and protector, cuddling next to him in his doggie bed.

Despite the abuse he suffered, Riley was an incredibly loving dog. Under our care and with Zu-Zu at his side, his health improved. He lived with us for just over two years before finally passing away last week.

We were thrilled to foster Riley and just wanted the world to know about him. Please tell your readers, if they have the means, to consider fostering rescued pets to prepare them for eventual adoption. -- Tracey L., Gloucester, Massachusetts

DEAR TRACEY: Riley indeed sounds like a wonderful dog, and I'm glad he found his way to you. Thank you for sharing his story.

Trooper recently came to us as a stray. Because of this we don't know too much about his past, although so far it looks like he doesn't mind other cats. He can be initially fearful with us, though if you give him a little bit of time he becomes quite affectionate. If you would like to meet him he's waiting at the Shuswap SPCA.

BC HORSE ANGELS

~Advocating for horses since 2000.

When "Reason" came in the auction ring, the meat buyer wanted her badly. She was the kind of young, healthy horse that gets top dollar for human consumption. BC Horse Angels bid $700 to keep Reason from dying in terror at an Alberta slaughterhouse. Yet the industry tells you only used up, unwanted horses are slaughtered.

Reason was a friendly, trained family pet, who'd had multiple drugs illegal in food animals. The kill buyer would simply sign a form saying she was drug free, and off she'd go to someone's dinner plate. Reason's owner told the auction her two horses were NOT to be sold for meat. Yet BC Horse Angels fought the kill buyer for both mares. They are now adopted to loving homes.

This is horse slaughter for human consumption in Canada. Please help us end this unregulated, cruel industry, and provide humane options for all BC horses.
