TIDBITS® SWITCHES ON SOME VINTAGE TELEVISION
by Kathy Wolfe

Whether you're old enough to remember these old TV shows or if you watch them on a syndicated cable channel, you're sure to find these tidbits about vintage television interesting!

- Fans of Knight Rider, which aired from 1982 to 1986, will remember that main character Michael Knight (then known as Michael Long) had been shot in the face during an undercover operation as an LAPD detective. His life was saved by Wilton Knight, whose doctors reconstructed his face, giving him a new identity. Michael Knight was provided with a modified Pontiac Firebird Trans Am controlled by a computer with artificial intelligence. The voice of the car, dubbed KITT (Knight Industries Two Thousand) was actor William Daniels, whose name never appeared in the show's credits throughout the series. During the show's run, Pontiac was overrun with orders for black, T-top Trans Ams.
- "Don't do the crime if you can't do the time" was the catchphrase of undercover detective Tony Baretta from 1975 to 1978. Baretta, played by actor Robert Blake lived in the King Edward Hotel with his cockatoo Fred, and drove a beat-up 1966 Chevy Impala, nicknamed The Blue Ghost. Robert Blake got his start in acting as a young child in the series Our Gang, better known as The Little Rascals, from 1939 to 1944.

- Sammy Davis, Jr. sang Baretta's theme song, "Keep Your Eye on the Sparrow." In later years, Robert Blake was charged with the murder of his wife, but was later acquitted.
- For seven seasons, four older women known as The Golden Girls shared a home in Miami, Florida. Rose, Blanche, Dorothy, and Sophia lived in Blanche's home, after the other three answered an ad on the bulletin board at the grocery store. Southern belle Blanche worked at the local art museum and Brooklyn-born Dorothy was a substitute teacher. Somewhat of a dingbat, Norwegian Rose hailed from St. Olaf, Minnesota. Dorothy's mother Sophia, born in Sicily, rounded out the quartet. Estelle Getty, who played the mother was actually over a year younger than Bea Arthur (Dorothy). It took about three hours to transform the younger woman into Sophia, with heavy make-up, thick glasses, and a white wig. At the start of the series in 1985, Getty was 62, playing an 80-year-old. All four of the Golden Girls actresses won Emmy Awards for their roles, with the show earning 68 total nominations during its 180 episodes.
- From 1984 to 1989, one of NBC's most popular programs was Miami Vice, starring Don Johnson as Sonny Crockett and Philip Michael Thomas as Rico Tubbs, undercover detectives in Miami. The series was loosely based on actual Miami crimes. The network executives hesitated giving Johnson the role because his four previous pilots had all failed. Character Sonny Crockett had played football for the University of Florida Gators and served in the Army Special Forces prior to taking

- Miami Vice pretty much invented the men's fashion statement of a T-shirt under an Armani sport coat, with white linen pants, and loafers with no socks.
- From 1982 to 1993, the regulars at the Boston bar "Cheers" interacted and shared life at the bar "where everybody knows your name." The week that the sitcom premiered, it landed in last place in the Nielsen ratings. Things definitely improved as it rose to first place over the years.

who moves to his hometown Seattle after his marriage ends to become a radio advice show host. Grammer had already played Frasier for nine seasons on Cheers, following by 11 seasons on the spin-off. When the role was first created, the writers had chosen Nigh as the last name of Frasier. Kelsey Grammer suggested the name change. Frasier and its cast accumulated 37 Emmy Awards over the 11 seasons.

- At the height of its popularity, one-third of American households were watching Family Ties every week. Michael J. Fox was 21 years old when he took the role of Alex P. Keaton, a conservative young Republican living with his liberal, ex-hippie parents. He was the producers' second choice for the part, having already chosen Matthew Broderick, who had to bow out when his father became terminally ill. The sitcom aired for seven seasons, beginning in 1982, and firmly cemented Fox's popularity, earning him three Emmy Awards. Fox filmed Back to the Future during Family Ties' third season, working on the series by day, and on the movie set all night and weekends. Fox met his wife Tracy Pollan on the set of Family Ties, when she was cast to play Alex's girlfriend. The series was President Ronald Reagan's favorite show.

- In 1968, two pilot episodes of Columbo were aired, starring Peter Falk as the ruffled, seemingly inept LAPD homicide detective. In 1971, the program became a regular, and went on to win 13 Emmys. Falk himself won four Emmy Awards. Falk has the distinction of being the first actor to be nominated for an Oscar and an Emmy Award in the same year, a feat he achieved twice. Dressed in his shabby beige raincoat, Columbo was depicted as a fumbling, bungling detective, frequently chewing on a cigar, pestering suspects until he extracted convicting evidence. Columbo's signature raincoat was actually Falk's own personal coat. The role of Columbo was offered first to "White Christmas" crooner Bing Crosby, who turned it down in order to concentrate more on golf and retirement.

- Robin Williams' first major acting role was in the sitcom Mork and Mindy, a spin-off of the popular Happy Days series. Williams first appeared in a Happy Days episode in February of 1978, and by September of that year, the new series had been launched. Mork, the extraterrestrial who came to Earth from the planet Ork along with his pet Bebo, greeted folks with the words "Na-Nu Na-Nu" along with a hand gesture and a handshake. "Na-Nu Na-Nu" became popular catchphrase of the late 1970s, along with Mork's profane expression "Shazbot." Williams, who was a big fan of the series Star Trek, opted for a costume that had actually been worn in a Star Trek episode.

- Mork and Mindy wasn't the only successful spin-off from Happy Days. Laverne and Shirley and Joanie Loves Chachi were also launched from the sitcom.

TIDBITS NUGGET OF KNOWLEDGE

REMARKABLE PEOPLE: JOSEPH LISTER

We've all heard of Listerine, but there's much more to Dr. Joseph Lister than mouthwash! Tidbits has the facts on this British surgeon who is considered the father of modern surgery.

- Joseph Lister got an early start in the world of medicine. His father, a wine merchant, was also an amateur scientist, who developed a microscope. Joseph spent his childhood years peering at a variety of specimens through the microscope, as well as dissecting creatures, studying their skeletons, and drawing them.
- While working as a surgeon in Glasgow, Scotland, Lister realized that half of amputation patients died from infection following the surgery. Surgeons were not required to wash their hands and there were no facilities for cleansing a patient's wounds in the operating theater. Doctors considered the stains on their unwashed operating gowns as a badge of honor of their experience.
- In 1865, while studying the work of French scientist Louis Pasteur, the father of pasteurization, Lister learned of the Frenchman's discovery that microorganisms could cause infection. Lister began conducting experiments using diluted carbolic acid, a coal-tar by-product that was used to kill the parasites found in sewage. He sprayed surgical instruments, the patients' incisions, and the bandages with the solution, as well as spraying the air within the operating room. All surgeons in his hospital were instructed to wear clean gloves and wash their hands with a carbolic acid solution before and after each procedure.
- Lister noticed the difference almost immediately. He treated the wound of a young boy with a compound fracture of his leg with the antiseptic solution, and no infection developed. By the following year, Lister's surgical ward was reporting that there had not been a single instance of blood poisoning, gangrene, or infection for nine months. Within four years, the mortality rate in his ward had been reduced to 15%.

- The new of Lister's techniques spread and in 1871, he was called upon by Queen Victoria to make a house call to her Scottish Highlands estate to treat an orange-sized abscess in Her Majesty's armpit. His carbolic acid formula prevented infection, and Lister became the royal family's friend for life. The queen later made him a baron.

"Crying is for plain women. Pretty women go shopping." – Blanche of The Golden Girls

- Lister did more than just revolutionize how surgeries were performed. He also engaged in the study of the action of muscles in the skin and the eye, and published 15 papers about that, along with his research into the coagulation of blood, and the reaction of blood vessels during an infection's early stages. Lister also pioneered a method of repairing kneecaps with metal wire, as well as an aortic tourniquet. He was also the first surgeon to use catgut sutures.
- So what did Joseph Lister have to do with the invention of Listerine mouthwash? Nothing, actually. In 1879, a St. Louis, Missouri doctor named Joseph Lawrence developed an alcohol-based formula for a surgical antiseptic. Lawrence named his formula Listerine in honor of Joseph Lister's efforts in reducing post-surgical infection. Although we think of Listerine as a mouthwash, in its early days, it was also marketed as a dandruff cure, hair tonic, deodorant, a cure for the common cold, a remedy for diphtheria, dysentery, and small pox, and as a floor cleaner.

MORE VINTAGE TV

Tune in! It's time for more facts on your favorite old television programs.

- The 20th century's longest-running primetime series, Gunsmoke, premiered in 1955 and ran for 635 episodes until 1975. By its second season, it was the most popular series in the U.S., a rank it maintained until 1961. John Wayne, who introduced the program's first episode, strongly promoted his good friend James Arness as the best man for the role of Matt Dillon, marshal of Dodge City, Kansas. Several actors got their start on the show, including Burt Reynolds, who played deputy Quint Asper from 1962 to 1965. Harrison Ford appeared in two episodes, and Star Trek star Leonard Nimoy was in four episodes. Although a romantic connection was always hinted at between Matt Dillon and saloon owner Miss Kitty, in all 20 seasons, Matt kissed just one woman – Michael Learned, who later played Olivia Walton, mother of the Walton brood – in 1973.
- James Arness wasn't the only member of his family to gain fame in television. His younger brother, Peter Graves, starred as Jim Phelps, director of the Impossible Mission Force on the series Mission: Impossible from 1967 to 1973, and again from 1988 to 1990. His starting salary in 1967 was $7,500 per episode. Following his Mission fame, he went on to star in the 1980 spoof Airplane!, although after first reading the script, he said it was "the worst piece of junk" he had ever seen.
- During his 30 years as the host of The Tonight Show, Johnny Carson delivered 4,531 monologues. The show was first aired nationwide on NBC in 1954 with host Steve Allen. Carson took over the reins in 1962. On his final appearance in 1992, there were no guests. Carson sat on a stool on the stage and showed clips of favorite moments from the show's history. That broadcast was viewed by more than 50 million people.
- The Tonight Show has the distinction of airing the nation's last cigarette commercial, after the Public Health Cigarette Act banned cigarette advertising on television and radio. The last commercial aired at 11:59 PM on January 1, 1971, advertising Virginia Slims cigarettes.

  - Who wrote and released "1-2-3" in 1965?
  - Name the song that contains this lyric: "Dear darlin', surprised to hear from me? Bet you're sittin' drinkin' coffee, yawnin' sleepily, Just to let you know I'm gonna be home soon."

Answers

- Elton John, in 1970. The song, off his "Tumbleweed Connection" album, can be heard in the opening of the film "Dog Day Afternoon."
- Chicago, off their third album in 1971. It was written by band members Peter Cetera and Danny Seraphine.
- New Colony Six, in 1968. Although it peaked at No. 22 on the U.S. Billboard charts, it was a No. 1 hit in the Chicago market.
- Len Barry. He was sued by Motown writers for allegedly rewriting The Supremes' single "Ask Any Girl" and agreed to give them 15% of the song's royalties.
- "How You Gonna See Me Now," by Alice Cooper (born Vincent Damon Furnier) in 1978. Legend says Cooper wrote the song after he had himself committed to a sanitarium for treatment of alcoholism. After his release, the band's road show was modeled on an asylum.

- Oddly enough, the names of Johnny Carson's first three wives were Joan, Joanne, and Joanna.
- A lab experiment gone wrong resulted in a gifted scientist zapping himself with too much gamma radiation, and morphing into The Incredible Hulk whenever he was under emotional stress. From 1978 to 1982, Bill Bixby starred as the scientist, with Mr. Universe bodybuilder Lou Ferrigno as the Hulk. Bixby made sure that he and Ferrigno were never photographed together when the Hulk was in his makeup, because he didn't want younger viewers to catch on to the fact that he and the Hulk were separate actors. The storyline was that scientist David Banner had no memory of what he did as the Hulk, so on the set, Bixby would not watch Ferrigno performing, and Ferrigno did the same with Bixby's scenes. Ferrigno spent much of his day in a refrigerated motor home to keep the heat and his sweating from melting his green makeup.

Each numbered row contains two clues and two 6-letter answers. The two answers differ from each other by only one letter, which has already been inserted. For example, if you exchange the A from MASTER for an I, you get MISTER. Do not change the order of the letters.

PAW'S CORNER By Sam Mazzotta

Kennel vs. Pet Sitter

DEAR PAW'S CORNER: How do I know if a dog-care facility or a dog sitter are legit? We're planning a vacation this summer and can't take "Riley," our German Shepherd. -- Barbara L., Parsippany, New Jersey

DEAR BARBARA: You're doing the right thing by checking out more than one option for Riley's care while you're away. A dog kennel has its good points -Ð as well as specific things to watch for. Likewise for a dog sitter, who will come to your home regularly to feed, walk and play with your dog. In New Jersey, animal facilities including kennels must be licensed annually. They also must be inspected by the local health department to make sure they are sanitary and comply with building codes. Of course, that's not enough to ensure a satisfactory boarding experience for Riley. No one wants to come back from vacation to find their dog got sick or, in the case of an Indiana couple, was lost. Here are some tips:

- Personally visit each facility and ask for a tour.
  - Do research online: Read reviews, search for notices of violations, and look for any news articles about the facilities, good or bad.
  - Ask around at the dog park: Find out where other owners boarded their pets.
- The regulations for in-home pet sitters are not as clear, and so you need to check out potential sitters closely. Word-of-mouth recommendations and positive online reviews are a good start, but don't go by these alone.
- Meet the sitters personally to interview them, learn about their experience and see how they interact with Riley.
  - Ask if they're affiliated with any national or international pet sitter organizations.
  - Find out if they are bonded and insured -- this protects both you and the sitter should anything go amiss.
